Area

Renowned for being the most bourgeois district of Paris, and little known by many Parisians, the 16th arrondissement is one of the most pleasant in the capital in terms of quality of life and tourist offers. Out of the way from the party venues, it will not satisfy nightlife enthusiasts. Despite everything, you will find lovely walks, some of the largest museums in Paris, as well as astonishing architecture, the 16th arrondissement housing, among other things, the most Art Nouveau buildings in Paris. Without forgetting of course the most exceptional view offered on the Eiffel Tower from the Trocadéro. It is in this district that the Parc des Princes and the Roland-Garros stadium are also located. Transportation This address is easily accessible using public transport, including the metro, buses and RER. You can move easily throughout the city of Paris thanks to the following transport: Metro: Mirabeau (line 10), located 7 minutes on foot RER: Gare D'Avenue du Président Kennedy Maison de Radio France (line C), located 6 minutes on foot Numerous BUS lines day & night Vélib station
